

Samuel A. Mann

Samuel A. Mann has been on the civil litigation team at Citron & Citron since 2014. He has represented clients in a wide variety of legal matters including insurance defense, habitability, personal injury (defense and plaintiff), products liability, toxic mold, discrimination and harassment, premises liability, employment, and landlord-tenant disputes. He handles all stages of litigation from initial investigation, discovery, and pleadings, through law and motion, and second-chairing trial. He has become a seasoned and experienced attorney having taken and defended many more depositions than his peers in the profession.

Sam completed the American Board of Trial Advocates (“ABOTA”) trial school with high reviews from his instructors.

Prior to joining Citron & Citron, he practiced civil, family, and elder law at one of the leading Orange County law firms specializing in family law.

As an undergraduate, he majored in Business Administration. Sam has worked in construction as a laborer. These life experiences have contributed to being able to better evaluate the value of cases.

Education:

- Biola University, B.S. (Cum Laude 2008)
- Western State University, J.D. (Scholastic Merit 2012)

Admissions:

- California State Bar (2012)
- United States District Court for the Central District of California

Representative Professional Recognitions/Affiliations/Activities:

- AV Preeminent® Peer Review Rated by Martindale-Hubbell® (Martindale-Hubbell’s highest rating, given only to lawyers with the highest ethical standards and professional ability. Approximately only 10 percent of all attorneys hold an AV Preeminent rating.)
- ABOTA – Los Angeles Trial School (2017)
- Member of LA County Bar Assoc., Orange County Bar Assoc., ASCDC and other professional organizations